Buffalo Hill News

The annual meeting of the ratepayers of the Buffalo Hill School District was held at the Schoolhouse last Saturday at 2 o'clock. There was rather more than the average attendance at a rural school meeting which, at times has been the three members of the Board only. This year there was a total of fifteen ratepayers present, which not only makes it more interesting but shows that others are taking an interest—or, to make it interesting for someone else. While the usual criticism was in evidence, apparently nobly relished the

Hockey Notes

Cardinals 7, Miners 2
Playing a return game on local ice last Wednesday night, the Cardinals proved their superiority over the Indian Miners by a score of 7-2. Both teams made many efforts to break through the opposing defence. During the first two minutes of play F. Mason received a perfect pass from Norton for the first goal. Oliver also scored as an assist from R. Leslie. During the latter part of the period Norton and McCullough broke through the defence and scored on McCullough's pass.

In the second period McCullough gave a fine exhibition of stick handling and tallied the only goal for the Cardinals of that period. Pat Bear Hat scored the first goal of the game for the Indians.

The third period opened with Leslie scoring goal Number five for the Cardinals. Soon afterwards McCullough made his second goal of the game for the locals. F. Mason picked the puck out of a scramble to score the seventh and last for Arrowwood. Phil Running Rabbit scored for the Miners within the last two minutes of play. Line-ups were:

U.F.A. and U.F.W.A. Held Joint Meeting

About fifty persons attended the joint U.F.A. and U.F.W.A. meeting in the Ingraham Bldg. on January 10th. Each group held their separate meeting, where matters of interest to each were discussed, then joined for the main program of the evening.

In the U.F.A. meeting the following officers were appointed: President, H. R. McBride; Vice-President, V. E. Vanell; Secretary-Treasurer, F. Miller; Directors, A. E. Starling, Darwin House, John Williams, H. Ward and Chris. McRivine. Mr. Vanell was chosen delegate to the U.F.A. Convention to be held at Edmonton. After the joint session Mrs. Kemper opened the program by reading an interesting biography of J. S. Woodsworth, the real founder of the C.C.F. Mr. J. F. Williams then gave a splendid paper on the Socialization of Banks, Credit and Finance as recommended by the C.C.F. platform.

Mr. Vanell then outlined the plank dealing with Agriculture. After these papers were given, Mrs. McBride read the resolutions dealing with the Douglas System, which are to be introduced in the Annual Convention. This led to a very interesting and animated discussion.

Mrs. McBride then called attention to the fact of there being two separate planks in the C.C.F., touching on all matters influencing the life of each of us, while the Douglas System dealt with the one plank of finance. The consensus of opinion of those present was that the C.C.F. platform and the Douglas System could be consolidated to the benefit of both. A contest featuring the names of some prominent U.F.A. and U.F.W.A. workers was then enjoyed, after which the ladies served a delicious lunch.

A pillow made and donated by Mrs. Ellis was raffled and the sum of $3.50 was realized. It was won by Mrs. M. H. Ward.

The next joint meeting will be held in the same place on January 31st, when the reports of the annual convention will be given. Everybody welcome.

SYNOPSIS
Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson young and in love. Early secretly, desiring to live their own lives apart, Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarreled. At the end of the story, Peter's mother, Mrs. Hoyt, is a chaste but Peter entertains Camilla's guests with impersonations.

(Now Go With The Story)

CHAPTER XXV

A brief lull followed Peter's resumption of his own character, during which Terry busied himself with mixing of highballs and lowballs. "Let's go somewhere," Camilla announced suddenly. She turned towards Camilla. "Not that your party isn't a riot, darling, but we need inspiration. Let's drive in to the Maddox and dance. We'll just about make it for the real fun!"

Her suggestion carried unanimously with those who expressed themselves, so there followed a general melee while the girls renewed their make-up and secured wraps, and the boys formed an imposing parade of powerful motor cars to await them. Another dilemma for Peter Anson. Would this evening—or night—never end? It seemed not. It just went on and on, from one alarming predicament to another. If only they might talk with Camilla alone and persuade her to announce their marriage. That would help somewhat, and provide diversion. As it was, being at the mercy of the stars, he found himself obliged again to share Terry's rumble seat with Avis, who secretly deplored the fact that she hadn't her own car in which to drive alone with Peter. Still, a rumble seat had its advantages, by which she might profit.

The Maddox Club was filled almost to capacity when they arrived, notwithstanding the economic depression, but enterprising waiters recognized some of their best patrons in the group, and managed tables for the ten. Jewels blazed in the smoky haze of the room like beacon lights in a sea of fog; laughter rang a high octave to the crashing notes of heavy china, shuffling feet and the orchestra accompaniment. Odors of perfumes and cosmetics, food and liquor, tobacco smoke and perspiring dancers mingled like the ingredients of a festive cocktail that dulled the senses and repelled a fastidious inclination.

The cafe, the cabaret, the speakeasy, all were old institutions, patronized only by their regulars. But the elaborate display of artistic effects, ten thousand-dollar-a-night music, daring vaudeville entertainment, and exorbitant food prices, were millionaire and pauper and crook not only rubbed along, but bumped into each other on the dance floor, was the eff-spring of war's lust and chaos.

The same instincts loosed for mental and spiritual debauchery instead of physical carriage. Yet conscientious promoters will denounce the one with horror and laud the other with display of patriotism and noble sacrifice.

Peter managed at last to dance with Camilla and to say, "Let's get out of here, honey, I know you didn't want to come. Can't we take your car and let Terry and Avis ride with someone else?"

"I wish we might. But how can we leave when I am the hostess?"

"It was Camilla who wanted to come here. Let her take care of the rest. Tell her that you're not coming back after the war is finished. If she others want to leave then, all right. But I've had enough of this, and so have you. Talk about leaving the city to go out to the beach where it's cooler, and then come back to this!"

"I know, but you know how restless I get if they have to stay in one place for long. I never expect to bring them here, and I don't care what mother thinks of me for dropping the party. Shall we go back to the beach where it's cool and quiet?"

"It was so they escaped, to spend the shore in the moonstruck night where only the sound of whispering waves which caressed the shore and the faint fragrance of their peaches. Its contrast with the place they had quitted was as unbelievable as it was assuaging.

Peter's weary discomfiting succumb to its soothing embrace. "Sometimes," he told Camilla, "I have reproved myself for taking you out just like this. I never regret it now. You do not belong there, you belong just with me."

"That is what I have told you many times. It is just the way of life I want to share, Peter, all of it—from the first anxious days of effort and hopes and discouragement to the last years of triumph and reward. Never—no matter how much fame and money you may have—shall we return to this idle waste of riotous living. Wealth may be a blessing as it should be."

"It's a curse,—and it will be, for us, Camilla. I was thinking just now of a cottage by the sea—for you and me—with work and happiness to fill our days and nights. A blue sea, under southern skies, where the glimmer of the tropics adds its beauty to romance. Perhaps in Sicily—there is a whole village of artists nestled there at the foot of Mt. Etna. Were you ever in Sicily? I wasn't, but I can imagine it."

"Yes, I think I've seen that same village, when I cruised the Mediterranean with mother two years ago. Such quaint picturesque cities and villages as we visited. It would be marvelous to see them again with you, Peter. She mused dreamily. "To drift on Lake Como at dawn or sunset and sail a sleek and swift boat, to browse in the little shops on the Ponte Vecchio in Florence where you wonder if you have not wandered back into the Middle Ages, to romance upon the balconies of Valladolid where Cervantes wrote the Don Quixote, to dream in the gardens of Seville!" The soft cadences of her voice mingled with the hulling waves and ceased.

"After a long silence, she laughed suddenly over an amusing memory. "I just remembered a Count Bobacki who was on that cruise and gave me a lot of attention."

"There must have been plenty who did that."

"Well, mother was terribly impressed with this party. But she and because I was little more than polite to him, she was in despair. It was reported that he owned huge estates and that in one country residence there was a different dining room for each day of the week. Imagine what a task that would be, not only to remember what day it was but which room corresponded with the day!"

"That's worse than having to turn your clothes inside out every day so it will look as if you had a change, and so have."

"He was also said to be a heavy gambler at roulette and Monte Carlo, losing as much as one hundred thousand in one night's play."

"Not half as bad as my losing twenty tonight at bridge. You don't know what a narrow escape that was for me, honey."

"I held my breath so long over that game, I almost forgot how to breathe. But aren't you sorry you were not more than polite to the Count's money?"

"I was sorry you were so busy and living with me you will remember those seven dining rooms."

"Not as long as I have the whole world at my disposal, I don't mind dining room for every day in the county I could tempt me. Oh, Peter, I wish we need not wait to realize our dreams."

He sat up suddenly in the sand. "We're not going to wait. That is just what I wanted to tell you about tonight. Why not let the crowd the truth in the morning; even if we can't afford to live together for awhile yet."

"Peter, that isn't keeping your promise to me."

"But don't you see how difficult it is, and how far we are from reality, but we have to do all kinds of things with other people. Please announce our marriage, dear."

Only Check It Court

When Motorists Fail To Realize Responsibility To Public

Operating on tracks, trains escape many of the dangers incident to other wheeled traffic. In railway yards the danger is further lessened by the exclusion of the public. Yet in these yards may be planned warning trainmen that the maximum permitted speed is 10 miles an hour. In the streets, which are without the protection afforded the railway yard operations, automobiles travel normally, if not legally, at from 25 to 30 miles an hour. The death rate due to motor traffic is practically accepted as inevitable. Five deaths from diphtheria occasion more concern than fifty from automobile accidents. So far nobody seems either to have been shy to do anything about it, or to have made any serious attempt in that direction.

When motorists fail to realize their responsibility to the public, the only check upon them is the courts.

Frequently the courts have appeared averse to treat motor criminals in the manner prescribed by the law. Drunken driving is obviously not a crime that should be tolerated in that it is to be safety on the highways. Yet time and again where the evidence has shown a motorist to have been drunk a shell-shocked soldier should drive a car even when sober.

There have, too, been cases where juries have considered poor visibility as a sufficient excuse for a fatality. But poor visibility should be a sufficient warning to a motorist to enable him to avoid becoming involved in an accident.

To motorists is applicable with especial force the adage that "eternal vigilance is the price of safety." The enforcing of that vigilance is the duty of all who feel any sense of shame in the heavy toll of motor crimes.—Toronto Evening Telegram.

THE CYCLE
The dead leaves, falling
Float down to ground
While under hedgerows
Piles many a mound.
Through them wind rustles,
On them snow drifts,
Pale winter sunbeams
Among them drifts.

So, slowly crumbling
Into decay,
The winter weather
Content the happiness
In spring how gaily
They danced in mirth,
And now are dusty
And dry as earth.

Yet these poor leaves whish
To dust and earth
In some far springtime
Will glow, will burn
In rose or lily,
Or waving grass.
They will come back when
The long year passes.

Buffalo Hill Notes

When the Chairman read the resignation of Mr. Frank McInelly, whose term of office did not expire for two years, there were no nominations to fill the vacancy. Finally the ladies came to the rescue, and Mrs. J. H. Wynt moved, accompanied by Miss Helen McInelly, that the resignation be not accepted.

The motion carried, therefore, Mr. McInelly is automatically still a member of the Board. The retiring Chairman then called for nominations for a trustee to fill the vacancy. There were no other nominations. After the customary time of half an hour, which the act calls for, Mr. Shatto was declared elected for three years, therefore the Board remains the same. Among other matters taken up was that of holding a dance after the annual Christmas concert and it was moved and carried that in future a dance be held, providing it did not interfere with the program. The present Board, which has served since 1924 (and some members even longer), went into office pledged to keep the taxes down, with due regard to efficiency and economy. The operation costs and the Inspector's comments to other districts, that the school was one of the cleanest and best arranged in its inspectorate, shows how the Board has, or has not, done its duty, which after is the usual reward or doubtful honor of being a rural trustee. Following is the actual yearly cost for operation since 1929:

1929	$1,724.11
1930	1,583.91
1931	1,420.80
1932	1,156.30
1933	1,016.53

We regret to learn that one of our neighbors, Mr. W. F. Jennejohn, is leaving the district, but our loss is some one else's gain. For the past eight years he has been farming the Pelen estate and during that time both Mr. and Mrs. Jennejohn have always joined in any social activity in the district, as well as associated themselves with the many co-operative ventures, which have been so successful, in the U.F.A. and the U.F.W.A. We wish them the best of luck in whatever they may undertake. The new residents are Mr. J. H. Douglas and family of Reid Hill district. There will likely be a sale of stock and implements near the end of February or the first of March.

Grandma Peterson, Mrs. W. F. Jennejohn's mother, celebrated her 91st birthday last Saturday, Jan. 13th. She is in her usual good health, except for a slight cold. Congratulations, Grandma.

The card party held at Mrs. Lent's last Saturday, by the Social Club, played eight tables of whist. Ladies' First was won by Mrs. Neveu. 2nd Miss E. Jennejohn, Gent's first, Seaford Johnson, second Oscar Severn.

Mr. Melvor, the teacher at Buffalo School, attended the military ball at High River over the weekend. He reports a splendid time, even if the return of a short distance was made on foot. People were there from Nanton, Macleod and other points.

John McFarland, who resides on the gravel opposite the Loma School, had the misfortune to lose his truck and garage and a new seed drill by fire on Jan. 11th. It was only by strenuous work that other buildings were saved.

"Reunion in Vienna"

Robert E. Sherwood's highly successful comedy, "Reunion in Vienna," has now been made into a talking picture, which is bound to please lovers of sophisticated comedy. In choosing the settings for his plays, Mr. Sherwood has ranged widely through space and time. "The Queen's Husband," which in its original form was given this season in Canada by the company of Maurice Colbourne and Barry Jones, was laid in some rather mythical island in the North Sea.

But in his latest comedy, "Reunion in Vienna," Mr. Sherwood has laid his scene in the Austrian capital of the present day. Very cleverly, in plot and mood, as well as in setting, this American writer has completely caught the half-romantic, half-sophisticated spirit of Viennese comedy. "Reunion in Vienna" might easily have been written by Molnar or any other witty author who was heir to the same tradition.

The picture version follows the original play very closely, only the opening and an occasional minor scene being changed: The film opens on the tenth anniversary of the fall of Hapsburg, and we see a crowd of visitors being shown by a guide through Schonbrunn Palace. Among them is Elena, a lovely woman of about 30. Her visit to the palace revives memories of the days before the fall of the dynasty when she was a girl and in the midst of a love affair with the handsome Archduke Rudolph, a gay and endearing young madcap.

No Excuse

He had not met anyone, no, not a man—so said Aotting Premier Coates of New Zealand, the other day—who understood the Douglas analysis. And the obvious implication was that it would therefore be entirely unreasonable for the citizens of New Zealand to expect him to understand it. For this statement Mr. Coates is roundly taken to task in the Christchurch Press and bluntly charged with taking his duties as a public man and member of parliament altogether too lightly. Says the Press:

"And in New Zealand today one's education is not complete without at least an understanding of the Douglas scheme and an ability to discuss its broader aspects. Certainly no candidate for parliament should have to confess that a plan so widely discussed—and so implicitly accepted by many people—is beyond his comprehension. There is admittedly a small hurdle to be overcome at the outset, since the scheme is necessarily described in technical language."

"It is one thing to understand the Douglas plan, of course, and quite another to accept it as sound, but when a proposition attracts so many converts it is the duty of every intelligent citizen to know at least its character and we should hold that it is certainly the duty of members of parliament to understand it."

The Douglas movement in Canada continues to gain strength and the time is rapidly approaching when no public man should be allowed to get from under the responsibility of taking refuge in the weak excuse that he does not understand it.—Ex.

Mr. Farmer—Spring is only a short time hence. Are you ready for it now, or will you have to put things in shape? The present weather is excellent for cleaning seed wheat for spring planting.

Now is the time to clean your wheat for spring use. We can supply you with excellent quality fanning mills at low cost. Also for your convenience you may rent a fanning mill at a moderate rental.

For a high grade oil use Autolene—It's Cheaper in the long run.

Farm equipment must be efficient to reduce costs. The John Deere Tractor is economical because of its light weight, coupled with fewer but sturdier parts, completely enclosed and automatically oiled, this plus efficient fuel carburetion and low oil consumption reduces power loss to minimum.

The new John Deere pulls three 14-inch stubble bottoms under difficult conditions and four under many conditions. It will operate a 28-inch separator with attachments. Has plenty of surplus power to meet emergencies. We can promptly supply you with both new and used models. Call in today and talk the matter over with us.
